ECVA Senior Female Competition To Be hotly Contested

Phillipsburg, St. Maarten, October 12th, 2022 Seven teams are raring and ready to rumble to see would end up on the top of the heap at the end of the senior female ECVA volleyball competition on Sunday 16th October. Action starts this evening with three matches on tap.

The home team (St. Maarten) is confident that on Sunday's final the crowd will see what home court advantage really means. In speaking to the press coach Leonardo Jeffers had this to say. "I have multiple reasons to be confident, we had an active season, the girls have been training for months, we have a very serious coaching staff, and the squad has experience and fresh legs so yes we are definitely planning to be in the finals." He affirmed.

Coach Janzen Patrick of St. Eustatius believes that 2022 is the year his team will upset the status quo, "Our girls have been training relentlessly for months, with one aim in mind, their focus is to do one better than the third place finish they had a few years ago. We are definitely going there with the aim of doing our best ever." He said.

Fitzroy Benjamin of Antigua was mindful to point out that the senior men won over St. Lucia in a similar competition and clearly stated that this is a signal of the changing of the guard." We expect the same thing to happen in the females. In fact we have gone as far as to formulate a plan for the finals. This can be redound to an overall improvement in volleyball in Antigua. The girls have had lots of preparation time and this is our moment". He said.

First time Coach Omari Hamilton of Anguilla was a little more conservative. "This is my first time at this level and we have been preparing to show up not back down. Once we step on that court we are not backing down. We don't expect to upset everybody but somebody, so lookout for us." He warned

Team BVI was not very optimistic. Coach Stephen Payne explained why. “This will be the first time competing since 2014. So it’s a return to action for us. However the girls showed a stark improvement in practice over the last several months and once this improvement manifests itself in the games it will spell trouble for the opponents.” He noted.

Grenadian coach Staciann Lake had some spice in her voice when she relayed her expectations

“Our girls are hungry, they have fire within and are very talented. These along with a determination to win are the perfect ingredients for winning the championship. We have trained long and hard so in this tournament the crowd will get a good watch.” She stated

Kendall Challery coach of the defending champs St. Lucia had the final say. “All of those teams coming to the competition know us very well. We intend to come as defending champs and leave as repeat champions. This is based on the core of players that I have confidence in to deliver.” He said.
